Bats Day in the Fun Park™, the premiere event on the West Coast if not the world, for the Gothic and Industrial subculture of all ages, is coming again this August 2007.

Anaheim, California, August 17th – 19th, 2007.

An estimated 3000+ people are scheduled to attend this year's 9th annual Bats Day in the Fun Park™ weekend. Gothic and Industrial people, ranging in ages from 6 to 60, from all over the world, will be attending the events to join in the festivities of the Bats Day™ Black Market Swap Meet, The Bats Day Ghoulish Gala, The Nightmare Before Bats Day™ Dinner Meet & Greet, which provides live entertainment from the Gothic and Industrial subculture, and the Bats Day in the Fun Park™ trip to Disneyland on the last day of the event.

Bats Day in the Fun Park™ has grown in to gathering that families as well as people in the Gothic and Industrial genres look forward to every year. It is a dramatic change from the humble beginnings of this event as it started as just a group of approximately 80 friends in 1999. Anyone and everyone are welcome to join in the fun. All information, ticket purchasing for all events, meeting spot times and locations for the Bats Day in the Fun Park™ Disneyland trip can be found by visiting the Official Bats Day in the Fun Park™ website, <http://www.batsday.net>. Over 2000+ photos from the previous Bats Day in the Fun Park™ trip can be found at the website as well. The Bats Day in the Fun Park™ events are not affiliated with the Walt Disney Company.

“It really must be the happiest place on Earth, when even the Goths can't stop smiling.”

- Claire Luna, Los Angeles Times Staff Writer

“Don't let anyone tell you that the Age of Irony is over. It's alive and well in California, and here's the proof: Goth kids love Disneyland.”

- Chuck Klosterman, Spin Magazine Story Writer

“Who could resist the fun – the gloomiest people in the universe in The Happiest Place on Earth?”

- Jonathan Gold, LA Weekly, Writer
